WHAT IS THE MEASURE OF Progress?

Progress can mean many things to different people. At Feeding the Gulf Coast, it means an improved POSITIVE IMPACT for those facing hunger. This clarity of purpose serves as our North Star and though progress in this pursuit can take shape in many ways, we have the benefit of always knowing where our path should lead us.

Feeding the Gulf Coast has a rich tradition of continuous progress in our pursuit of ending hunger stretching back more than 40 years ago. Over the decades, new programs, facilities, and processes have allowed us to reach those in need under both blue and the grayest of skies.

2021 was no exception to this proud tradition of progress. Our team continued to navigate a world changed by a pandemic. New programs were developed and implemented to respond to this crisis and to reach those in need with the amazing help of our partners who have never stood down during these trying times.

Additionally, we worked to evolve to meet tomorrow's challenges. While there are too many initiatives to list here, a few examples include a much-needed expansion at our Florida facility, full implementation of our School Pantry Program, and new technology and processes to better reach more children, seniors, and families in need.

We still face many challenges such as shortages in our food supply and increased costs in nearly everything we rely on. Though challenges can seem insurmountable, we have the past to look to for inspiration and a belief that our path to our common purpose will lead us to an improved outcome for those we serve. With the help of our partners, volunteers, and donors, progress will be achieved.

Humble Beginnings

INCORPORATED

In the fall of 1980, the food bank was given the green light to open its doors. After a year of preparation, Bay Area Food Bank began serving those in need in Baldwin and Mobile counties on December 1, 1981.

The initial facility in downtown Mobile, a mere 900 square feet, was loaned by the Catholic Archdiocese of Mobile and shared with the Loaves and Fish noontime soup line.

LETTER CARRIERS' FOOD DRIVE

Stamp Out Hunger began in 1994 and has served as a critical large-scale annual food drive for the food bank.

FACILITIES

Feeding the Gulf Coast has distributed out of multiple facilities. The current Alabama facility was built in 2000. The Milton facility was added in 2009, and the Gulfport facility opened in 2016.

DISASTER RELIEF

The food bank distributed more than 8 million lbs. in response to Hurricanes Dennis and Katrina. Later, the food bank became a critical partner in assisting communities with recovery from the BP Oil Spill.

PROGRAM GROWTH

There was a rapid increase in programmatic methods of addressing food insecurity during the 2000s. Child Nutrition Programs, SNAP Outreach, and creative food sourcing helped expand the food bank's services to the community.

Reaching New Limits

Expanding Capacity

After a few years of operating out of a facility in Pace, FL, the food bank broke ground for the current Florida facility located in Milton in 2009. Though the food bank was distributing 3 million pounds of food in Florida during this time, the facility was built for future growth. However, in a mere decade, the output from this facility greatly exceeded the original expectations, creating several operational challenges.

In 2020, the food bank began a large-scale expansion project to increase the usable warehouse space to 20,530 square feet, an additional 68% more food storage capacity. The project included expanding the dry storage area, converting the former cooler to a freezer, and adding a new cooler. This expansion, completed in 2021, enables us to accept more perishable products, such as produce, dairy and proteins, and to take advantage of more bulk purchasing opportunities to increase supply.

Feeding the Gulf Coast hosted an Open House event with multiple ribbon cutting ceremonies on December 9, 2021, to showcase the finished project. With food insecurity rates in the Panhandle at higher levels than the national average, this project allows the food bank to significantly increase the volume and variety of healthy food it provides to families struggling with hunger.

STUFF THE TRUCK

On our anniversary, we hosted a kick-off food drive event to collect 40 thousand pounds throughout the holiday season. The Mayor of Mobile joined us for the occasion, proclaiming December 1 as "Feeding the Gulf Coast" Day in celebration.

"After 40 years, we are still strong. Our mission is just as great today as it was yesterday."

— PEGGY LYLES

Decades of Fighting Hunger Together

"The world just feels different here. Amidst the whirl of forklifts and box trucks, there's a cheerful din, a sense of camaraderie and hope, a unified resolve. It's actionable passion with a purpose, and it's demonstrated by every employee and volunteer on site. No two people understand this innate drive better than Feeding the Gulf Coast's longest continuous employees, Peggy Lyles and Lavern Sewell."

- Amanda Hartin, Mobile Bay Magazine, November 4, 2021

Many staff make up the heartbeat of the food bank's ongoing mission over its 40-year history. However, two individuals who have spent decades pouring into the service of Feeding the Gulf Coast were around to help roll in the milestone year. Peggy Lyles and Lavern Sewell can share some incredible experiences and also very humble beginnings of the food bank. As we poured through old photos for the timeline, we noticed the two were often side by side no matter the occasion.

"We have a great job ahead of us. There's still a lot of work to do."

There were photos of staff and agency partner meetings, volunteer food sorting shifts, and others where the two were joyously pushing barrels full of food collected from Stamp Out Hunger.

We saw that these two, along with many other early employees, had a long-range vision of what the food bank needed to be and where it needed to go. The staff of today is grateful for the food bank trailblazers over the past four decades. Their passion for our mission and dedication to seeing the work completed have set us up to be the strong organization we are today.

Helping the people we serve gain access to healthy foods is critical. Ensuring food waste is minimized in the process is an essential part of our mission as well. Connecting with local farmers results in less produce left in the field, and more nourishing food on the plates of those in need.
